Judging from the republican ticket as published in the Libertyville Independent, McHenry County has annexed Lake and will give us an entire new set of County officers. For years past McHenry has claimed everything in sight, but we did not suppose that brother Just would concede the point without a struggle.

Grand Illumination July 4th.

Mrs. P. B. Campbell will give a grand display of fireworks Friday evening, including a grand display of our late President. William McKinley, in fireworks. This display will take place exactly at 8:30 near the Antioch opera house. The dance will follow immediately after the display of fireworks.

Olgar Factory Locates at Rockefeller.

The little village of Rockefeller is not exactly experiencing a "boom" and yet the location of a small industry, with bright possibilities has given an impetus to the place.

Mr. Cameron, of the firm of Fitzgerald & Cameron, oligar manufacturers, of Chicago, has spent many delightful vacations in and about Rockefeller and became impressed with the advisability of removing factory there. The necessary shipping facilities of such a business are afforded, and employees can live much cheaper there. The result is the factory is now located in the Knigge store building, which has been vacant for some time, and the firm greatly pleased with the change. Employees are certain to appreciate Rockefeller, as compared with Clark street and consequently all is serene.

Of course but twelve or fifteen hands will be employed at first, but there is sufficient room for expansion and who knows but that in time Rockefeller will boast a thriving industry. —Libertyville Independent.

Congressmen Much Alike.

Congressman Prince of Galesburg, Illinois, and Congressman Lloyd of Missouri, are frequently mixed up by those who do not know them intimately. Each has a handsome, flowing mustache, a fine, musical voice and easy, gentlemanly address.

Preachers Away from Home.

"It says here, Samanthly, the Reverend Toogood was a saloon passenger on the Maletic. Beats all how them preachers do cut up when they get away from hum."—Judge.

Blind Creatures of the Earth.

One hundred and seventy-two species of blind creatures are known to science and many more are constantly being discovered in great caves.

WILL DAM THE FOX RIVER

MEETING HELD AT LIPPINCOTT HOTEL SUNDAY

The Fox Lake Improvement Association Decides to Build Dam in River at McHenry.

The Fox Lake Improvement Association, of which Congressman Wm. L. Lorimer, W. H. Lyford and Henry Klein are committee men met at the Lippincott at Fox Lake to hear the report of the committee on water-way privileges appointed some time ago.

The meeting was called to order by Mr. Lorimer and on his motion Henry L. Hertz was elected chairman of the meeting. The committee reported that a survey of Fox Lake and the Fox River had been made by a competent engineer who reported that the level of the waters on the Fox River at McHenry were eighteen inches lower than the level of Fox Lakes and that a dam three feet high at McHenry would raise the water level on Fox Lake two feet, or about twelve inches lower than the present water level which every one conceded to be amply high for all purposes, while a few of the cottagers on lower grounds considered fully a foot to high. The committee also reported that in order to maintain the water at a level suitable for the purpose a dam some 450 feet long with a rise of three feet above the surface of the river would have to be built at an estimate cost of $7000 and that a bill had passed Congress and was signed by the President giving authority to the Association to erect such a dam and that all that was needed to complete the work was the necessary cash.

This phase of the proceedings drew out considerable discussion on the ways and means of raising the amount. A number of individual property owners around the lakes pledging to contribute liberally to the fund while Mr. Jackson, representing

Burned in Waukegan Hotel Fire

Clara Miller, a domestic in the employ of Vajentine & Tiller, who run a hotel on Madison street in Waukegan, narrowly escaped being burned to death. The hotel took fire, a curtain blowing into a lamp. The girl was in bed, but was awakened by the smell of smoke and arising opened her door which led into the room in which the fire started. The flames rushed through the door and ignited the woman's night dress. Miss Miller screamed and Mr. Tiller, who was near by, rushed to her assistance. He beat out the flames and finding that escape was cut off by the doorway rushed to the window. The girl room was on the third floor. As Mr. Tiller looked out of the window he saw a boarder leaning out of a window below where he was standing. He called to the man and then lowered the unconscious girl to the boarder who grasped her in his arms and then in turn lowered her to the ground, where she lay until medical aid could be summoned.

In the meantime Mr. Tiller started to fight the fire. The department soon arrived and the flames were subdued with chemicals. The loss is fifty dollars covered by insurance. The girl is badly burned about her face, neck and breast, but will recover.

Edible Kerosene.

Cottaged oil, corn oil, and lard oil; there is good reason to believe, will probably have a rival at a not distant day in edible petroleum oil. As a matter of fact, petroleum has been successfully desulphurized and demineralized. Certain other solids and ingredients have been extracted from it and the production of a fairly good edible oil has already resulted.

England's First Cup of Tea.

The first cup of tea that was made in England was made by the Earl of Arlington, at his home, Arlington House, which stood where Buckingham Palace now stands. The Earl bought the tea from a Holland merchant for sixty shillings a pound.

CONGRESS ENDS SESSION

PHILIPPINE CIVIL GOVERNMENT BILL SIGNED

Congressmen and Senators Depart for Their Homes—President Leaves for Oyster Bay.

Congress closed peacefully Tuesday afternoon and the senators and representatives are fitting away to all points of the compass. Most of those who did not leave on Tuesday will go Wednesday and Thursday. President Roosevelt departed on the midnight train for Pittsburg not to return again until he comes in October to occupy the restored and rejuvenated White House.

President Roosevelt, accompanied by secretaries Hay, Shaw, Moody, Hitchcock and Wilson, and Postmaster General Payne went to the capitol Tuesday afternoon in order to facilitate the work of Congress, and in his room in the Senate wing of the capitol the President signed the Philippine civil government bill, the naval appropriation bill, and other measures that went through in the closing hours of Congress. President Roosevelt expressed disappointment that the session must end without any action to reduce the tariff on products in Cuba, but he recognizes that nothing can be done at present. He has hoped to be able to lay before Congress a treaty of reciprocity with Cuba, but although a treaty has been drafted it is still in the hands of the Cuban government for approval and there is no hope that it will be ready for the signature of Secretary Hay and Minister Quesada for several days at least.

President Roosevelt told his callers that he was looking forward with a good deal of pleasure to his summer's sojourn at Oyster Bay. He will rejoin his family there immediately after his trip to Pittsburg on July 4, and will seek as complete rest as possible during the month of July and the

WEEKLY CROP BULLETIN

U. S. Department of Agriculture, Climate and Crop Bulletin of the Weather Bureau.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., July 1, 1902.

Though light showers occurred in some parts of the state early in the week, they were generally insufficient to hinder farm work to any considerable extent. The weather was not, however, favorable for harvesting and haying. The latter part of the week heavy rains occurred over the entire state and farm work was prevented entirely. Over the northern and central districts where the rainfall had previously been excessive, these heavy rains have injured the crops, but over the southern district where the weather had generally been too dry, the crops have been benefited. In some parts of the state high winds accompanying the rain done considerable damage. In some localities rain was so heavy as to flood bottom lands. Weather has been cold during the week, though it was warmer in the extreme southern part of the state than elsewhere, and this has retarded the growth of vegetation somewhat. Wheat and rye harvest has been retarded by rain, though these crops are practically all in shock in the southern district and over a considerable portion of the central district. Threshing has begun in the southern district and the yield ranges from very poor to very good. Many correspondents state that the yield is better than was anticipated. Though in a few localities in the central and northern districts the crop is poor, it is generally reported to be good in these districts. The wet weather has caused a very rank growth of oats in the northern and central districts, and in many localities they are already very badly lodged. Notwithstanding this, however, the prospects for a good crop still continue favorable. In the southern district the prospects are less favorable, though there has been some improvement. In this district oats harvest has already begun. Notwithstanding the cool weather of the past week corn has done very well. In some localities the growth is very slow, and in other localities it is turning yellow on the ground. A great deal of the crop has been laid. The heavy rains in the southern district will greatly benefit the crop in that section. Broom corn looks well. The hay crop is generally quite heavy, though much lighter in the south than elsewhere. Conditions have been unfavorable for haying, and much clover has been put up in bad condition. Potatoes and garden truck are generally good, but the heavy rains have caused potatoes to rot in some localities. The apple crop averages poor, though in some localities it is exceptionally fine. The peach crop will be very light. Peas and small fruits range from very poor to very good crops.

Entertained the Rebekah Social Club

One of the pleasant social functions of the season was the meeting of the Rebekah Social Club at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Sutton Friday evening last, on which occasion some forty odd members and invited guests met at their pleasant home and spent a most enjoyable evening. The rooms were handsomely decorated with flowers and emblems of the order, which presented a very pretty sight. The pink and green idea (colors of the order) was carried out to the letter. A fine literary and musical program was arranged for the meeting, consisting of several good numbers, conspicuous among which was the recitation in character by Mrs. George R. Olcott, which brought down the house to use a figurative manner of speech. The original reading by Mrs. N. Pullen and the duet by Mesdames Blanchard and Burnett were among the pleasing features of the evening's program, which was as follows.

Presentation of Gavel to R. S. C. L. M. Hughes, officiating. Club Business attended to. Music—selected, Miss Libbie Webb. Recitation, Eva Mack. Reading—original, Mrs. N. Pullen. Recitation, Shirley Olcott. Duet, Mesdames Blanchard and Burnett. Recitation, Leslie Harden. Reading, Mrs. Bell Shugart. Song—selected, Mrs. N. Burnett. Music, Miss Libbie Webb. Reading, Mrs. Gertrude Blanchard. Recitation, Mary Burke. Recitation in character, Mrs. G. R. Olcott. Memory Contest for prizes. Presentation of Prizes J. J. Burke. Vocal music—Sweet Home, Everybody. Luncheon.

A very pretty feature of the evening, was the little children dressed in white wearing pink and green hats and carrying little baskets upon a wand which were filled with bon-bons, who marched into the room and distributed them to the guests. The baskets, wands and hats were all made of pink and green tissue paper.

After an elaborate lunch was served a social hour was spent in various memory contests, Mrs. G. R. Olcott winning first prize by naming the greatest number of articles on a table, while Mrs. Norris Proctor captured the consolation prize, having named the least. The evening was one replete with enjoyment and will long be remembered by all present as one of the pleasant recollections of their lives. J. J. BURKE.

L. A. PADDOCK'S BLUFF LAKE RESORT

Makes Gas From Air.

Henry Souder, a grocer at Cleveland, Ohio, has made a discovery which bids fair to revolutionize the industrial world and to solve the problem of heat and light. Souder lights with a gas he makes himself, and he has succeeded in interesting such men as Alfred DeForest, secretary of the American Steel and Wire Company; John Van Epps, manager of the Delaware & Hudson Coal Company, and F. H. Green, purchasing agent of the Lake Shore Railroad Company, to back him in the organization of a company.

How Souder makes the gas is a secret. It is, however, taken from air, and is cheaper than coal, wood or oil for fuel. It will, it is claimed, displace coal in the firing of locomotives and all steam engines, as well as blast furnaces. With a trunkful of chemicals, it is said, a steamboat could be run from New York to Liverpool.

The heat of this gas is sufficient to melt copper in the open air. It gives off a light that is most brilliant.

The grocer is 43 years old. He has been working on his invention for years.

How to Prevent Coal Strikes.

When the United States government shall buy the coal fields of America, and operate them in the name of all the people, there will be no more strikes. Miners will be paid living wages for fair hours of work. Coal consumers will escape the regular annual gouges. Boys who are now forced into the mines before either body or mind is fit for the task, to eke out with their pitiful wages the meager earnings of their fathers, will then be kept in school to learn the lessons of useful citizenship. Thanks to John Marshall, the father of the American Constitution, and by the same token the father of American Socialism, as Mr. Geo. Wilson, of Lexington, Missouri, reminds me, the federal government has indisputable power to take over the mines. It has several thousand times the amount of wealth needed for the transaction. When will it acquire the common sense?—From "Note and Comment," by Frank Putnam, in July National.

first half of August. Toward the last of August he will make a trip to Maine and several other New England states in response to invitations accepted from time to time during the last few weeks.

In September he will make a long western trip, the itinerary of which has been practically completed, and in October will go to Texas and other states and territories in the southwest. During his vacation at Oyster Bay the President will transact only the most necessary public business, and will receive as few official visitors as possible.

Amusements For the Fourth.

At the Antioch Driving Park there will be races held to commence promptly at 2:00 o'clock, and some good horses have been entered and those interested should be sure to attend if they wish a good time.

At Selter's Summer Resort in the evening will be held a dance, where music will be furnished by Stine's orchestra consisting of four pieces, and all who attend can be assured a good time as "Robt." is famous for seeing that everyone enjoys themselves.

At the Ramaker House (the new proprietors are making an extra effort to make their Fourth of July dance one long to be remembered, and all who attend can rest assured that no expense will be spared to make this dance one long to be remembered by all who attend.

For County Treasurer.

Confident that I may lawfully hold the office for the coming term, I hereby announce myself a candidate for County Treasurer, subject to the approval of the County Republican Convention.

GEORGE N. GRIDLEY.

For County Sheriff.

I hereby announce myself a candidate for the office of Sheriff of Lake county, subject to the decision of the Republican county convention.

FRANK D. FRITSON.

For County Treasurer.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for the office of County Treasurer of Lake county, subject to the will of the Republican County Convention, and solicit the support of my friends.

"In the first place, it struck me all that it was a strange thing that the head should have been cut off. There seemed no motive for such mutilation, unless to render identification difficult, in which case the clothing and jewelry might also easily have been removed; or unless there were a plot to make it appear that the body of a stranger was that of Miss Wynne. After the finding of the body," I went on, "it occurred to me to try and put on the foot of the dead woman one of the shoes which had been found inside the crown of the hat. Even allowing for the swelling of the flesh, the body having been for some time in the water, it was evident that the shoes which I can state upon oath were those which Miss Wynne wore on the afternoon of her disappearance—would in any case have been several sizes too small. The woman whose body was found in the moat, though of much the same height and general build as Miss Wynne, had feet which were considerably larger. And this was also true of the hands, for, allowing for swelling, as with the feet, there were signs that the skin had been torn in forcing the rings."

"I think it is impossible to rely upon any evidence of this sort," one jurymen said audibly to another.

My heart sank a little, but still I went on:

"When my uncle, Sir Wilfrid Amory, took us under his care we were both children, and played constantly together. It was in Sussex, one day, when Miss Wynne was almost 8 and 12 or 13, that we were wading barefooted in a brook, and my cousin, stepping on a sharp stone, hurt herself seriously. She was unable to walk for some time, and when she did recover a scar was left on the sole of her right foot, which in those days she very often displayed to me. It is not now more than six months ago that the old episode happened to come up in the course of conversation, and my cousin assured me that the scar was still as strongly marked as it had ever been. It was peculiar, and unmistakable, at least two inches in length—a dead white scar, jagged as the tooth of a saw."

"I very carefully examined the feet of the body now lying in this house, and on neither is there any scar whatever."

There was a visible stir among the jurymen. I paused for an instant, and was asked by the coroner if this piece of evidence completed my statement.

"No," I returned, "I have still something else to say, of equal, if not more, importance."

Deliberately I removed the gold links from my cuff and pulled up the sleeve of my right arm. Between the wrist and elbow, an anchor and heart, neatly tattooed in blue ink, were distinctly to be seen.

"I learned the trick of doing this sort of thing from an old sailor, when I was a boy," I said. "I did this tattooing myself, and my cousin insisted upon having a design of the same kind on the inner side of her right arm, above the bend of the elbow. And now, if you will have the doctor who examined the body recalled, you will hear from him the confirmation of my words—that there is no scar upon the foot, nor stain of tattooing upon either arm."

I had finished; I had said all that I meant to say, and I felt that the aspect of the case was changed; but, still, the time which intervened before the finding of the verdict passed more heavily than any moments my life had ever known. At last it came. "Murder, by a person or persons unknown, upon the body of a woman unknown."

"Thank heaven!" said Uncle Wilfrid, beneath his breath. But Haynes-Haviland did not speak. He went up to my uncle and shook hands, but there was that in his face which contradicted the cordiality of his action.

"Terry," Uncle Wilfrid said, "I did mean to be the one to tell Consuelo. But, on second thoughts, I would prefer it to be you. Go to her, and put an end to her suspense."

I knocked at her boudoir, and Consuelo herself opened the door.

"I have good news," I said, and told her what the verdict had been.

She took it calmly; but she held out both her hands.

"And for it all I have to thank you," she said. "Once you saved my life. Now you have saved what is worth more to me and to those who care for me. What reward will you have?"

"I have done nothing," I returned. "I do not want, much less ask, a reward."

"But I'll offer it to you!"

My pulses leaped.

"Then, there is but one thing on earth I have begged of you, and—refused it. Do you still refuse?"

"How can I tell, unless you ask it of me again?"

"You told me that was what I never must do."

"But I am a woman. May I not change my mind?"

"Consuelo, give me your love."

"What if I promised you my love, and could not promise that you and I should ever be more to each other than we are at this moment?"

Her hand was on my breast, holding me at arm's length, when I would have come nearer than I had ever dared to do before.

"I should consider myself the happiest man alive to have won that inestimable gift. Is there any hope that I may win it?"

"You never knew that—it was already won," she said, in a low voice. "But your cousin Paula knew. Women are wiser in such matters than men."

"You love me?" I cried; then I shall never cease to hope, I shall never rest, I shall move heaven and earth until I have gained all!"

"To gain all you must indeed move heaven and earth," she echoed; "for there are obstacles you do not dream of in the way."

"I shall beat them down," I exclaimed buoantly. "Now that you have told me you love me, what obstacle is mighty enough to stand between you and me?"

"Mr. Thomas Gordon!" announced a footman, appearing at the door.

CHAPTER XIX.

He had been at Martenhead all day, it seemed, and had now come with congratulations. But I could see that his sudden appearance had depressed Consuelo. Both ladies retired especially early that night. I had hoped for a few more moments of heaven with Consuelo, but I was denied them. She was very tired, she said, and her face confirmed her words.

For long I sat brooding, and at 1:30 I got up with a sudden inspiration for a stroll to the river side before going to bed. I had scarcely stepped out into the white purity of the night when two voices made themselves audible—Consuelo's and Miss Trill's. They were on the other side of the huge tree, out of my sight, as I was out of theirs.

"Are you sure he is coming?" said the Woman in Gray.

"Well, one is never sure of anything that he is going to do; as I've told you before, I can't control him."

"You will be very foolish if you don't pay this price. But, see, here he comes. I'm sure it must be he."

I lay still on the rustic seat under the black shadow of the cedar.

"It is he," I heard Miss Trill say.

"He would prefer doing business with you alone."

The man I could not see, but I knew that he had come, for the Woman in Gray spoke haughtily, breathing the one word: "Well?"

"Well," repeated a heavy masculine voice, with an unpleasant provincial drawl. "I've heard from Naomi, and I've come to see if I can't get you to consider matters. You'd better, you know, for you are under my thumb, and if you don't do what we want, you can guess what the consequences will be."

A word or two more I caught, and then they walked away beyond hearing. I was glad of this. But never once did I remove my eyes from the short, squat form of the man.

Moments elapsed. Sometimes the two strangely assorted companions glided on side by side; sometimes they paused, in earnest conversation. But at last, with a gesture which seemed to be of utter desperation, the Woman in Gray hurried swiftly away without one backward look.

She was evidently going to the house, and at first I feared the man would follow her. But he did not do so. He stood still, his chin sunk into the hollow of his hand, the moonlight shining full upon him. For several minutes he appeared to reflect, and then began walking toward the gate.

It would have been easy for me to follow and catch up with him, but this I did not wish to do. I wanted to follow him to his lair, wherever that might be, and, if possible, discover something so much to his disadvantage that he would be as completely in my power as he had persuaded Consuelo to believe she was in his.

My quarry slouched along the lawn until he struck into the avenue; then on again, until within fifty yards of the porter's lodge, when he took to the grass once more, and suddenly disappeared through an aperture in the thick hollyhedge, for which he had apparently intentionally been making. I gave him a start, and then plunged through the thicket.

A long, straight road now lay before me, extending on the one hand to Martenhead, on the other to a town of considerable size, called Witherton, about four miles off. For a few seconds he seemed undecided which way to go, then turned in the direction of the latter place.

At the station I managed to persuade the porter to sell me his overcoat, and had it buttoned upon me, when I saw my man going to the ticket office. I stood in the background while the fellow purchased a third single to Ralston.

Getting into the train, I was glad to find that we had a carriage to ourselves, my unsuspecting quarry and I. I started a conversation, and, after a time, he said:

"Ever heard of Sir Wilfrid Amory, who has lately bought a big place near Martenhead?"

"Oh, yes—Lorn Abbey. I've heard his name."

"Ever seen a tall, fine-looking young woman he's taken to live in his house?—adopted her for a daughter?"

"She is already famous throughout the country for her beauty."

"She is good-looking. Better-looking than she used to be when I knew her first."

"Ah, you're old friends, are you?"

"Friends! Not much. You wouldn't think, to look at me, if you have ever seen her, that we could have much in common; but I tell you there aren't many people on earth who know her as well as me and mine do. She's cheated me out of my just dues. Thinks she's too high for me to hurt her. If I should so much as open my mouth about that pearl mitten she wears on her hand by day and night, she'd be famous, I can tell you, for something beside her beauty."

I could bear no more; patience and caution were gone like a flame blown out by a puff of wind. I was about to answer in a way which would have surprised him when, with a mighty shock and a wail which seemed to rise from the lips of every one among the hundreds of passengers, I was thrown headlong upon him, under a shower of splintering timbers and crashing glass, a thunder of sound breaking over me like the waves of ocean.

After the shock came cessation of all motion. I lay still for a moment. Then I looked out of what remained of the window, and saw that such passengers as were swarming out from the wreck ed carriages in front and behind me. The air was thick with shouts and cries, and above all was the sound of escaping steam.

I remembered my companion, and proceeded to unearth him from beneath a broken seat. His right leg was bent under him, and hung so limply that I was certain it must be broken. I had no friendly feeling for him, but I could not see him suffer. I soon brought him back to consciousness.

A dozen or so among the passengers were injured, and when I had done what-ever I could I got a doctor from the village to look after my charge. When his leg was set, he was able to tell us a bit of information I received with surprise—that he was Jonas Heckleberry, of the Spider Farm, near Market Peyton.

The place was not more than fifteen miles away, the surgeon said, and the best thing for the sufferer would be to have him conveyed home at once. This task, with an impulse which did not spring from charity, I took upon myself.

By this time it was nearly 10 o'clock in the morning, the breakfast hour at Lorn Abbey. "Would Consuelo have thought of me, I asked myself, and wondered at the unexplained absence of her lover?"

The telegram which I sent both to her and to Uncle Wilfrid from Ralston seemed cold and meaningless, and Consuelo's words and tone in places several times before I could satisfy myself.

It was a four-mile drive from Market Peyton to the Spider Farm, and as I began to think we must be nearing the place I looked out with curiosity. What-ever there was that was "queer" about Jonas Heckleberry's business I meant to know. Whatever might be learned against his character and pursuits I intended to have within my knowledge, that, if he lived, and attempted again to trouble the Woman in Gray, I might be prepared to turn the tables upon him.

The farm gate we got to at length, and I found to my surprise that it was locked with a padlock, fastened to a chain. I easily vaulted over the fire or six bars, however, and fancied I should have no difficulty, when the nature of my errand became known, in obtaining the key, that the carriage might be driven up to the house.

The road inside the gate was thickly grass grown, as though a wagon had seldom passed over it, and the house itself, I soon saw, was a large and rambling one. Heavy wooden shutters were drawn over all the windows on the ground floor. I seized the rusty knocker, and beat out a summons which echoed dimly from room to room within.

In response came the baying of a dog, but there was no other sign that my loud knocking had been heard. Again I repeated it, and at last, discouraged, began padding up the garden through the wilderness of weeds to the back of the house. I went to the left, and I had skirted the side of the building, and arrived at the back, when a movement at a half-shuttered window attracted my attention.

I stepped close up to it, and peered inside. A face retreated, and another remained—a face unlike any that I had ever seen before. It was long, and covered with a series of flabby wrinkles bagging under deep-set, bloodshot eyes, and though the cheeks were as dark as an Indian's, the huge, prominent nose was a pale flesh-pink. At first, as I neared between the shutters, under a curtain of vines, into the darkness within, I believed this face to be human. But in an instant I saw that it was that of an enormous dog of a breed I had never met with.

Though the room into which I gazed was dark as looked into from outside, a cross-light from a half-open door revealed the figure of a little old woman. On her head was a great floppy cap across her naked breast. A black-and-white check shawl was folded. A stray lock of gray hair fell over a yellow, receding forehead, and I was struck with an eerie sensation as I observed how wonderfully alike were the two faces—that of the big dog and the tiny woman. Both were old, flabby, long-lipped, sunken-eyed, animal in expression, though, indeed, it seemed to me that the dog's was the more intelligent and benevolent of the two.

"Don't be alarmed," I shouted. "I have brought you news of Mr. Jonas Heckleberry. Pray come to the door, and let me have a few words with you."

CHAPTER XX.

My only answer was a rush for the door behind her, through which the uncanny creature retreated, loudly alarming it after her retiring form. I ran down the road to the gate where the landau awaited me, and wrenched off the chain.

"Drive in," I said, curtly.

In a few more moments we had stopped at the back of the house, whither I had hidden the driver, and as I felt that I should not be able to break in that solid-looking door of oak or iron, fastened on the closely barred shutters, I proceeded forcibly to wrench up the lower sash of the window through which I had looked.

Hardly had I done so when the huge dog, which had been anxiously awaiting its opportunity, leaped out. I stood ready, with my blood up, for the encounter, but with a snarl in my direction he sprang past me towards the landau, upon which he began to bark, with whinings and crotchings of his great body.

Having made an opening for myself, I climbed through the window and dropped down into vast and gloomy kitchen. I stood still, staring, forgetting for the instant the errand upon which I had come, and then suddenly something scuttled across my feet.

It was a hairy-legged spider, with a fat, bloated body as large as a shilling piece. I sprang aside, for I had always had a loathing of spiders. Myriads of spiders limped or darted along the boards, and their crawling bodies and wriggling legs gave, from a distance, an effect as though the walls themselves had moved.

With all speed I got myself out of the repulsive room, opening the door through which the old woman had disappeared. This, I found, led into a bare, wide passage with a stairway at one end. Half way up was a small landing, with a door and a window, past which I would have gone had not something sprung out at me with the unexpected viciousness of a Jack-in-the-box.

I had just time to ward off a blow aimed with no less formidable weapon than a broken-headed ax; and then, quickly removing it from the withered little hand that grasped it, I held at arm's length the old woman who had lately led from me below stairs.

"I am sorry," I said, "to restrain your freedom for a moment, madam. Only be patient one moment, until I have informed you that Mr. Jonas Heckleberry, whom I can hardly be mistaken in supposing to be your son—is outside in the carriage you can see from this window, seriously injured in a railway accident."

I released her thin little arm, which I had been tightly holding, and had the satisfaction of seeing her trot with youthful alacrity down the stairs. I followed, and having seen her crouching over the half-conscious man, I found that opposite the horrible room of darkness in which I stood, the army of spiders was a second door, which I unceremoniously flung open, and found myself in a combination of kitchen and dining room.

Here I dumped some bedding I had found upstairs, upon the ragged carpet. I hastened out to the landau. The old woman had climbed in beside her son, and was listening, with a quieter and sadder expression than she had worn, to the mutterings which fell from his lips.

A Parrot Performer.

The capacity of the gray parrot for imitation is well known. A contributor to Nature describes a young bird who was a "born actor," as the phrase is, and who had not only the power of mimicry, but also the more remarkable power of accompanying his words by appropriate dramatic action.

He played with a piece of wood exactly as a little girl plays with her doll. He would take the wood in his claw and would say to it, imitating the voice and gestures of his mistress or one of the servants:

"What! Are you going to bite me? How dare you! I will take the stick to you!"

Then he would shake his head at the wood and say: "I am ashamed of you! Whom did you bite? Go to your perch!"

He would then take the wood to the bottom of his cage, and putting it down on the floor, would hit it with his claw several times, saying:

"Naughty! I'll cover you up, I will!"

Then he would step back from it one or more paces, put his head on one side and say, as he looked at it:

"Are you good now?"

The writer of this letter says that no attempt was ever made, deliberately, to teach the parrot this or any other of his histrionic performances. He picked them up spontaneously from his own observation, and placed them together from memory.

He was brought to his owner straight from the nest in Africa; therefore his dramatic instinct was intuitive, and had not been strengthened by association with the stage and its people. This remarkably clever gray parrot died at the early age of one year and eleven months.

Tilden's Campaign Method.

It was Mr. Tilden's faith in the power of the people to form a correct judgment on any question submitted to them that led to his final triumph.

"I have spent over $2,000 for postage in this campaign," he said to a young man after 1874.

"Do you mean to say that you sent out 60,000 letters?" asked his astonished visitor.

"That's about the number," answered Mr. Tilden.

"But where did you get their names?"

"My long connection with the Democratic State Committee had familiarized me with the chairman of the County Committee in almost every county in New York. To him I therefore sent for a list of names of men in every village in his county."

"And did you send printed letters to them?"

"Better than that," Mr. Tilden said, while his gray eyes twinkled: "I sent each of my correspondents a lithographed fac-simile of my own handwriting."

"And how did it work?"

"Splendidly," he answered. "In conclusion, says the Utica Observer. 'After I was elected and had gone to Albany occasionally I'd have a call from a citizen who would introduce himself to me by means of one of my letters to him, and who would say: 'I didn't think you knew me, Mr. Tilden, until I got this.'"

Roosevelt's Heavy Life Insurance.

Since he became chief executive of the nation, President Roosevelt has become one of the most heavily insured men in the United States.

The President has taken out a policy for $50,000 in a New York company, besides continuing policies for smaller amounts which he had taken out long before he was elected Governor of New York.

President Roosevelt's policies, it is understood, exceed by $15,000 or $20,000 those held by President McKinley.

Mrs. McKinley was paid about $80,000 on policies on her husband's life.

How to Avoid Trouble.

A young cock saw a weathercock on top of the house, and, thinking him a rival, began crowing fiercely.

"If you keep on making on a noise like that," said the old bird, "they'll wring your neck for you."

The young cock looked thoughtful.

"Take example by me. I've got along and have been looked up to for half a century by simply keeping my bill shut and turning with the wind."

WORK OF CONGRESS.

IMPORTANT LAWS ENACTED IN FIRST SESSION.

Scope of Legislation Covers Singular Problems—Philippine Government Engrosses World's Attention—Canal Measure Climax of Fifty Years' Effort.

The first session of the Fifty-seventh Congress has been marked by exceptional business activity, with many questions of far-reaching general interest engaging attention. With the exception of the Cuban reciprocity bill most of the larger subjects of general legislation have been enacted as laws.

Notable among these is the Isthmian canal bill, which consummates the efforts of half a century to link together the waters of the Atlantic and the Pacific. Aside from its national and international importance this bill probably involves a larger sum of money than that in any other single undertaking by the government outside of war expenditures.

The Philippine civil government bill is another measure of far-reaching importance, extending to our remote Pacific possessions a system of internal civil government, together with coinage, currency, banking, corporation, timber and home-stead laws.

Among the other important general laws enacted are the following:

Repealing the war revenue taxes.

Extending and making more effective the Chinese exclusion law.

Establishing a tariff on goods to and from the Philippines.

Extending the charter of national banks for twenty years.

Establishing a permanent census office.

Restricting the sale of oleomargarine by placing a high tax on imitation butter.

Providing a diplomatic and consular service for Cuba.

Establishing an extensive system by which the government will aid the irrigation of the arid sections of the West.

The repeal of the war revenue taxes reduced taxation $73,250,000 and is said to be the largest single reduction of taxation ever made in this country. By this step the last of the taxes imposed at the beginning of our war with Spain was wiped out.

Philippine Tariff Act.

The Philippine tariff act imposes 75 per cent of the Dingley tariff rates on articles coming from the Philippines to the United States and also imposes on articles entering the Philippines from the United States the rates of duty established by the Philippine commission.

The oleomargarine act results from several years of agitation. It places a tax of 10 cents a pound on substances colored to imitate butter.

The irrigation act is of special importance to the development of the West. It creates an irrigation fund in the Treasury Department into which are to be paid the proceeds of the sales of public lands in the arid States. This fund in turn is to be used in storing water and establishing irrigation systems, the irrigated sections to be open to homesteaders, who are to be charged a proportionate share of the cost of the improvement.

The Chinese exclusion law continues exclusion "until otherwise provided by law," and also applies the exclusion "to the island territory under the jurisdiction of the United States."

Bills Still in Progress.

Aside from these important laws there are a number of other measures of general importance which have passed one or both houses, but have not progressed to the final stage.

These include the anti-anarchy legislation, which grew out of the assassination of President McKinley. Bills, restricting anarchy and throwing safeguards about the President have passed both branches of Congress, but it has been impossible to reach an agreement in conference, so that the subject goes over until next December.

A bill giving statehood to Arizona, New Mexico and Oklahoma, known as the omnibus statehood bill, passed the House and the Senate has determined to take up the matter early in the next session.

Other Important Laws.

The ship subsidy bill secured early attention in the Senate, but the end of the session has come without the measure being reported to the House. As it passes the Senate the bill grants graded subsidies to steam and sailing vessels of American build. In the House it has been deemed desirable to let the subject go over until the short session, when it is expected a bill on the subject will be reported and urged to passage.

The bill creating the Appalachian forest reserve, including a vast tract in the Appalachian mountain section of the South, has received favorable attention in both houses, but has gone over for final adjustment of differences until next December.

Another bill passed by the Senate and likely to become a law changes the marine hospital service to a national health bureau and gives the bureau larger powers and facilities for co-operating with the State health authorities in quarantine and health affairs.

The bill to establish a cable between the United States, Hawaii and the Philippines was retired by defeat in the House of Representatives.

Halt by the Way.

Several other measures have advanced to a certain stage and have then halted without much prospect for further ad-

APPROPRIATIONS ARE NEAR THE BILLION-DOLLAR MARK.

No session of Congress except in time of war has equaled the total appropriation of the first session of the Fifty-seventh Congress. It has been practically a "billion-dollar session."

The total for the first session of the Fifty-sixth Congress was $710,150,857. The increase of $217,083,410 includes $175,000,000 for the Isthmian canal. Provision is made in the bill that $130,000,000 of this amount shall be provided for by bonds, but this does not detract from the appropriation as an obligation of the government.

The appropriations and the purposes for which they were made are as follows:

Agricultural	$ 5,280,000
Army	91,500,000
Diplomatic	1,037,000
District of Columbia	8,550,000
Fortifications	7,333,000
Indian	5,300,000
Legislative	25,300,000
Military academy	2,027,000
Navy	78,530,000
Pensions	130,845,300
Postoffice	138,410,500
Rivers and harbors, new work	20,720,442
Sundry civil, including cabinet	10,123,550
Deficiencies, urgent and general	200,500,000
Outstanding claims and miscell.	5,000,000
Isthmian canal, authorized but not actually appropriated	175,000,000
Permanent appropriations	123,921,229
Total	$827,836,202

As shown by the foregoing table, the largest increases are in the postoffice, navy and urgent deficiency bills and in the appropriations for new work on rivers and harbors.

These include the bill for the election of United States Senators by direct vote of the people. It passed the House by practically a unanimous vote, but in the Senate has received little attention and is not likely to pass.

The House passed a bill relating to the immigration laws, codifying and amending these laws in relation to important changes. It has been reported to the Senate, but there is not much prospect of its passage at this session.

The bill defining the meaning of conspiracy in injunction cases passed the House of Representatives, but has not made much progress in the Senate.

New Portfolio Delayed.

On the other hand, the Senate passed an important measure creating a department of commerce, to be presided over by a cabinet officer, but it has made no progress in the House, not having been reported from the committee on commerce.

Another bill of interest to the commercial world is the pure food measure, which was drafted by the pure food congress and after extended hearing was reported from the House committee on commerce, but not passed.

The Fowler bill probably was the most important financial measure which has been brought before Congress. After considerable public discussion and several conferences by the members of the House it has gone over for consideration next December.

Another financial measure, known as the Hill bill, providing for the coinage of subsidiary silver and for the retirement of the present standard silver dollar, has passed the House, but has not been acted on in the Senate.

Enacted Into Laws.

Among the other important measures of general legislation not heretofore named which have been enacted finally as laws are the following:

To prevent the sale of firearms, opium and intoxicating liquors to the natives of certain of the Pacific islands.

To promote the efficiency of the revenue cutter service and to provide for the retirement of its officers.

To refund the duties paid in Porto Rico on articles imported from the United States during the military occupation.

Appropriating $200,000 for the relief of the volcano sufferers in Martinique.

Authorizing the erection of Y. M. C. A. buildings on United States military reservations.

Regulating the introduction of eggs of game birds for purposes of propagation.

Providing for the protection of game in Alaska, particularly the large game, such as moose, caribou, etc.

Extending an invitation to the French government to participate in the unveiling at Washington of the statue of Marshal De Rochambeau.

Refunding the amount of legacy tax paid by charitable, benevolent and eleemosynary institutions.

The amount of appropriations for the session will run unusually high, owing in part to the amount required to build the Isthmian canal.

The appropriation bills have contained little general legislation, being confined chiefly to the regular needs of the various branches of the government. The naval bill provided for an addition of two armored cruisers, two battleships and two gunboats to the navy, and a provision is still in controversy as to whether one of each class of these ships shall be built in government yards.

Investigations During the Session.

There have been several investigations during the session which have attracted much attention.

An investigation of conditions in the Philippines conducted by the Philippine committee of the Senate has led to the examination of many witnesses high in the conduct of civil and military affairs in the islands.

Another Senate inquiry has related to the condition of affairs in Cuba, especially as to sugar.

In the House sensational charges made in connection with the purchase of the Danish West Indian islands led to an investigation which, it is believed, disclosed the groundless nature of the charges.

The Cumberland Presbyterians will establish a college at Adgerston, forty miles southeast of St. Joseph, Mo.

Chicago officials have discovered that worn-out horses are slaughtered in that town and the meat sold for beef.

Julie Opp, the actress, has been divorced in London from Robert Lorraine, an actor, to whom she was married in 1897.

There has been severe cold in the district of Perpignan, France. Crops are liable to be ruined and the farmers are in despair.

The rumor that Great Britain intends to purchase the district of Lorenz Marques, in Portuguese East Africa, has caused great excitement in Portugal.

The Finance Minister, Dr. de Lukacs, announced in the Hungarian Diet that he will shortly introduce a bill providing for the abolition of sugar bounties in France and will make proposals which the government thought would be beneficial to the sugar industry of the country.

ANTIOCH, ILLINOIS.

Secretary Root's recent communication to the Senate contains a significant statement of the gradual reduction of the military forces in the Philippines. In 1891 there were 70,000 American troops in the islands. Today there are but 23,000 and orders for the return of 5,000 more have been issued. No better evidence of pacification of the islands could be desired.

Human people should emphatically protest to their Senators and members of Congress against the passage of a bill which has been reported from the House committee on commerce. The bill proposes to make it possible to detain cattle in transit on the cars without rest, food or water for forty hours at a stretch. The present law limits this torture to twenty-eight hours.

Reports received at the State Department indicate that the presence of the United States squadron under the command of Rear Admiral Crowhield in various European ports is having the effect of facilitating the work of our European consuls, the presence of so fine a fleet materially increasing the respect of the natives for the United States.

The triumph of having initiated the construction of the Isthmian canal will belong to the Fifty-seventh Congress, a Congress distinctively republican in both branches. By the terms of the Spooner amendment should the Panama route prove impracticable, operations will be immediately begun on the Nicaraguan route.

While President Roosevelt will make an extended tour of the country early in the fall, he will not indulge in campaign oratory. He will, however, appeal to the people to support him in his contention for Cuban reciprocity, which he regards as involving the national honor and as above partisan politics.

Representative Loud of California recently made an earnest plea for consistency in raising the salaries of government employees. He maintained that if the letter carriers were to receive $1,200 per annum the railway mail clerks ought to receive $1,600 instead of the average of $1,020 now paid them.

Secretary Moody is rapidly confirming the wisdom which lead the President to select for the naval portfolio a man who had for so long and so creditably been associated with the House committee on Naval affairs. Mr. Moody is putting into practice many of the reforms which he conceived in that capacity.

The threat that Great Britain will effect a reciprocity treaty with Cuba falls rather flat in view of the fact that Great Britain has practically no tariff duties from which to grant concession. She has a duty on tobacco but it is the duties on sugar which the Cubans find most onerous.

The stories of the waning influence of Platt, of New York, which are circulated from time to time, cause amusement in Washington, where the extent to which the great politician is consulted by his associates in New York is appreciated as it is no where else.

The Salvador Government has passed a law providing that any Salvador attorney who shall represent an American in the courts of that country shall be subjected to life imprisonment. The sentiment which prompted that law is not likely to induce an influx of American capital.

The insincerity of the democrats in demanding lower tariff rates is demonstrated by their untimely intention of blocking the passage of the Cuban reciprocity bill in the Senate, had they been given the opportunity.

The Public Lands committees of both the House and the Senate have reported favorably on a bill to make a national park of the territory which includes the wonderful Wind Cave of South Dakota.

The University of Pennsylvania is the recipient of a handsome donation, Joseph Wharton, founder of the Wharton school of Finance and Economy, having added $300,000 to the endowment of that institution.

Dr. Garnaut, a French scientist and physician, has deliberately inoculated himself with the virus of bovine tuberculosis in order to prove the error of Dr. Koch's assertion that the disease is communicable to man.

The acrimonious sarcasm with which democratic members of Congress received the recent speech of the Hon. Grover Cleveland was entirely in accordance with the vaunted harmony of their party.

OOD FISHERMEN SLEEP LITTLE

Their Work Keeps Them Busy About Twenty-Two Hours a Day.

Once begun, codfishing on the Banks is incessant, and when the fishing is good the men rarely ever sleep. Awakened at 2 a. m. to fill their bait "kidda," or tubs, they start at daybreak to lift these trawls and remove the overnight catch, rebaiting the hooks again. There are about 3,000 hooks to handle, and this often occupies until evening, when the boats row back. After unloading, the deck is piled high with the glittering mass of fish. To eviscerate this and stow it in the hold keeps them until midnight, when they snatch an hour or two of sleep.

Some men go without sleep for a week, others will rub wet tobacco in their eyes, so that the pain may keep them wakeful a few hours longer. Others again will work till they drop from sheer exhaustion, and sleep as they lie, until roused by comrades. A Chinese torture is to keep men without sleep, says Almanac's Magazine, and "banking" does this to an extent to satisfy even the most exacting celestial. The men sleep in their underclothing; when above decks they can never leave off their elkskins, for on the Banks it is rarely fine; mist and muck prevail and the rigging and sails drip water always.

Called the Title Market.

In China an official announcement recently appeared that after a certain date the title of mandarin would not be sold to anyone. The result was that everyone who had not that title and who could afford to purchase it made haste to do so.

Moreover, many others who longed to be ennobled, but who had not the money at hand, lost no time in disposing of a large portion of their property and in forwarding the proceeds to the officials who had been commissioned by the empress to confer the coveted title on those who were deserving.

It is intimated that since this announcement was made the Imperial treasury has received over $8,000,000 through the sale of titles and that the total amount which will be obtained in this way before the time for conferring the titles expires will be between $10,000,000 and $12,000,000.—Stray Stories.

Few Letters an Advantage.

Stress of business and the dearth of time will lead to a change in President Roosevelt's signature. He has always been accustomed to write out his first name in full, but he finds that it will save him about 50 per cent of time and trouble to make it simply T. Roosevelt. Where a man has to sign his name about 1,000 times a day it makes a big difference. There is a man in the office of the auditor for the Post Office Department who, it is said, owes his appointment largely to the fact that his signature contains but five letters. He is Second Deputy Auditor N. Chew. He does little but sign his name and he does that for about eight hours a day steadily.

An Extravagant Wife.

"I'm afraid, my boy," said the retired millionaire sadly to his son, "that you will have to leave college and look for a job."
"Leave college!" echoed his son in surprise. "Why, I supposed you were very rich, father."
"So I was—once," replied the old man, dejectedly, "but riches sometimes take wings, my boy. I could have got along without meat, but your mother would insist upon having it every day."

Band to Destroy Sparrows.

The Sparrow club of Eisenham, Essex, England, formed of fifteen farmers, have destroyed 38,000 old sparrows during the past ten years. The members pledged themselves to kill between September and May as many sparrows as they had farm acres. This year only one member had failed to keep this pledge, and he, being seventy short, has paid the customary forfeit of a penny a head on seventy unslain sparrows.

The Boundary Line.

A well-known judge on a Virginia circuit was recently reminded very forcibly of his approaching baldness by one of his rural acquaintances. No More the Calla Lily.

Hereafter it must be called simply the "calla," and not the "calla lily." The very careful and accurate Philadelphia Ledger gives this luminous explanation of the difference: "The 'calla lily,' it may be remarked, in correction of a report from California, is not a lily at all; it is a calla, and none of its beauty is lost in giving it its correct name."

Why He Believed in Fairies.

How a Town's Name Was Made.

Few persons know how the new town Donora was given its name. It is simple enough. The first syllable is part of the name of W. H. Donner, president of the Union Steel Company, which started the town, and the last syllable is the first name of Mrs. A. W. Mellon, the wife of one of those heavily interested in the town and steel company.

Natural Fountain Pen.

Pine needles grow in pairs in the same sheath, and when placed side by side the sharp-pointed ends are exactly opposite. Fasten these two needles together by a thread quite near the pointed end, and you will have a pen with two sharp nibs, ready to write whatever you please. As penholder insert the pen into a hollow twig, letting the points stick out about half an inch. Dip your pen into an inkstand, letting it remain for a short time in the ink. The ink will rise by capillary in the tube formed by the junction of the two needles, and will form a reserve of liquid sufficient for the writing of twenty lines. The pen is fine, simple, and won't rust.—Pearson's Weekly.

German Emperor's Good Nature.

The Neueste Nachrichten, of Berlin, publishes a characteristic anecdote about the Kaiser. On a recent afternoon, in the course of their usual walk in the neighborhood of the Tiergarten, the emperor and empress were met by a soldier and his sweetheart, a servant girl, neither of whom noticed the vicinity of the imperial couple. The girl was the first to grasp the situation. "Willy," she cried out, "the Kaiser." The soldier convulsively sprang into the street and drew himself up as stiff as a ramrod. The poor girl remained petrified on the footpath. The Kaiser turned to her laughing, "Go and fetch your Willy," he said, and continued his walk.

Very Remarkable Cure For Diarrhoea.

"About six years ago for the first time in my life I had a sudden and severe attack of diarrhoea," says Mrs. Alice Miller, of Morgan, Texas. "I got temporary relief, but it came back again and again, and for six long years I have suffered more misery and agony than I can tell. It was worse than death. My husband spent hundreds of dollars for physicians' prescriptions and treatment without avail. Finally we moved to Roques county, our present home, and one day I happened to see an advertisement of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy with a testimonial of a man who had been cured by it. The case was so similar to my own that I concluded to try the remedy. The result was wonderful. I could hardly realize that I was well again or believe it could be so after having suffered so long, but that one bottle of medicine, costing but a few cents cured me." For sale by all druggists.

The Origin of "Windfall."

Did you ever have a "windfall?" and did you wonder why you called it so, when the wind had nothing at all to do with your good fortune? It was to the peasants in William the Conqueror's time that an actual windfall meant good luck. They were forbidden, under severe penalty, to cut a forest tree, but whatever the wind blew down was their own; hence their greatest fortune was a heavy wind storm and its consequent "fall." And hence the name we give our modern good luck.

Spring sale of SHOES---

We are now opening spring styles of the Celebrated "SELZ" SHOE

You are probably aware that Selz, Schwab & Co. are the largest makers of shoes in the world. While they make the most they also aim to make the best. We believe they do, therefore we sell them.

On these goods, noted for their superior style, finish, fit and wearing qualities, we are now making lower prices than the same goods can be bought in this U. S. of America.

We give you here a sample price:

Selz Royal Blue Men's Shoe, 3.50
this same shoe which we sell at $3.50 is sold at the uniform price of $5.00 on State street and thousands of them sold at that price.

Selz Woman's Walking Boots, 1.75
Selz Woman's Vici Kid Shoe, 2.75

The above are only a few of the sample prices which we are making on the full line of these shoes.

We are also closing out some odd lines at very low prices, many of them at 25 per cent of manufacturers cost price.

SULPHOGEN RELIEVES all Stomach and Bowel Troubles

by destroying the germs that cause fermentation. If you have Dyspepsia, Gastritis, Colic, Diarrhoea, Dysentery, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuritis, Keloidosis of the Heart or Eruptions of the Skin use Sulphogen. It is the smallest amount of food consumed. Buy a can from your dealer.
Sulphogen Chemical Co., 1824 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.

I have had occasion to use your Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine and am pleased to say that I never used anything for stock that gave half as good satisfaction. I heartily recommend it to all owners of stock.
J. B. BELSHER, St. Louis, Mo.

Sick stock or poultry should not eat cheap stock food any more than sick persons should expect to be cured by food. When your stock and poultry are sick give them medicine. Don't stuff them with worthless stock foods. Unload the bowels and stir up the torpid liver and the animal will be cured. If it is possible to cure it. Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine unloads the bowels and stirs up the torpid liver. It cures every malady of stock if taken in time. Secure a 25-cent can of Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine and it will pay for itself ten times over. Horses work better. Cows give more milk. Hogs gain flesh. And hens lay more eggs. It solves the problem of making as much blood, heat and energy as possible out of the smallest amount of food consumed. Buy a can from your dealer.

Cholera Infantum.
This has long been regarded as one of the most dangerous and fatal diseases to which infants are subject. It can be cured however, when properly treated. All that is necessary is to give Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and castor oil as directed with each bottle, and a cure is certain. For sale by all druggists.

Historian's Method of Work.
Among the coronation peers will be W. B. H. Lecky, the historian and member of parliament for Dublin university, who will take his seat in the house of lords as Lord Lecky of Carlow, where his landed property is situated. Mr. Lecky has always been troubled with an extremely delicate constitution, and it is not generally known that his inability to withstand the physical strain of writing in the ordinary way compelled him to adopt the extraordinary method of lying on his face on a bed with a blotting pad on the pillow, and in that posture he has written by far the greater part of his historical works.

Naval Officers Not Good Dressers.
A deal of friction between the army and the navy has been caused in London by the publication of a remark by an army officer overheard in a club window in Pall Mall. Some naval officers were passing and the critical military observer exclaimed: "I have never seen a naval officer with a well cut or well-fitting pair of trousers." And now the fight is on in the news, papers and is raging with much bitterness.

Veteran Politician Reappears.
An interesting incident of the Oregon election was the success of the venerable George H. Williams in the race for mayor of Portland. This is the "Laundale" Williams whose purchase of a costly carriage at government expense, though for private use, contributed to the scandals which agitated Grant's second term as President. He has been lost to sight in national affairs for twenty-five years.

Swindling the Dead.
A curious industry in China is the manufacture of mock money for offerings to the dead. The pieces are only half the size of the real coins, but the dead are supposed not to know the difference. The dummy coins are made of tin, hammered to the thickness of paper and stamped out to the size required.

Rummage Sale on High.
A small boy stood looking down at the cradle in which lay his brand-new sister, arrived the day before, who was making strenuous and abortive attempts to cry. "Did God send that?" he demanded with disgust written on every line of his small countenance. "Gee! he must be having a rummage sale!"

Medical Service in Russian Army.
In the Russian army there is no medical corps existing as a distinct unit, although each combatant unit owns a small medical personnel. On account of the breadth of territory and the still incomplete railway development, military sanitary convoys are organized, and an elaborate organization of divisional and mobile field hospitals.

Long Sitting of Parliament.

The longest recorded sitting of the British house of commons was in 1881. On Monday, January 31, 1881, the house, having met at 8:45, continued sitting until Wednesday at 9:30—a continuous sitting of upward of forty-one and a half hours. The next longest sitting occurred in 1877. On Tuesday, July 31, 1877, the house, having met at 3:45, continued sitting until Wednesday afternoon at 6:15, a period of twenty-six and a half hours.

American Leather the Best.

American kid leathers are growing in favor abroad, especially in Australia. Recently one of the largest morocco manufacturers in Lynn, Mass., made a shipment to that country of 3,500 dozen skins, which shipment is said to be the largest ever made from there for foreign parts. It is not so very long ago when the best kid shoes were made from skins imported from France. Now France is buying large quantities of kid from this country.

Religious Sunday Paper.

A dispatch from Richmond, Va., of May 20, says that, to prevent the people from reading the Sunday newspapers, and patronizing excursions on Sunday, the Methodist ministers of Richmond propose to publish a paper which shall contain only what they think people should read on Sunday, and distribute it free. They are also providing for counteracting entertainments.

Illinois Central Through to Florida.

Beginning Monday, Jan. 6, 1902, the Illinois Central will run a through sleeping car between Chicago and Jacksonville, Florida, via Nashville, Chattanooga and Atlanta. It will leave Chicago daily at 6:10 p. m. and arrive at Jacksonville the second morning, running over the celebrated "Dixie Flyer" scenic route. This is an extension of its all-the-year-round Chicago and Nashville sleeping-car line.

MILLBURN, ILL.

John Greese, a guest at Lippincott's hotel, was drowned in Fox Lake on Monday, June 23, some time near the noon hour. He left the Lippincott shore in a boat about 11:15 a. m. which was the last time he was seen alive. The body was not recovered until Friday, June 27, at which time it was discovered by Charles Muercke near Indian Point, Fox Lake, about 12 o'clock.

Coroner Taylor, of Libertyville, was summoned and an inquest was held, after which the jury rendered a verdict of accidental drowning as the cause of death.

Swedish Women Firemen.
The little town of Massos, in Sweden, has a female contingent, 150 strong, in its fire brigade. The water supply of the village consists simply of four great tubs, and it is the duty of the women "firemen" to keep these full in cases of fire. They stand in two continuous lines from the tubs to the lake some distance away, one line passing the full buckets and the other sending them back.

Difference in Girl Students.
Bare-headed and with their sleeves rolled above their elbows, the learned girls of Chicago University go about the campus. Not so their studious sisters out at Evanston, the Methodist suburb. "There is such an atmosphere of refinement and culture in Evanston," says Dean Martha Foote Crowe, "that I do not believe it would be possible for our girls to be careless of their appearance about the campus."

Languages of Animals.
The dog can emit four or five different tones, each indicative of a special mental condition, and each fully understood by its companions. The fowl is credited with from nine to 12 distinct vocal sounds, each capable of a special interpretation by its fellows. The gestures of the lower animals are either facial, like the grimaces of the monkey, or changes of bodily attitude, like those of a dog.

New York Buildings.

There are in the borough of Brooklyn 20,000 apartment or tenement houses (less than half the number of New York), 11,000 stores, 10,000 stables, 5,000 factories, 541 hotels or hotel saloons, 315 schools, 540 churches, ninety-six theaters, ninety-one lodging houses, 215 clubs, forty-six station houses, 126 engine houses, 153 hospitals and asylums, and 1,300 warehouses.

Character is bounded on the north by industry, on the east by integrity, on the south by morality and on the west by sobriety.

AN UNFORTUNATE ACCIDENT.

Japanese Women Mix Up Order of European Costume.

Rear Admiral Coghlan, who was with Dewey at Manila, brought home with him a lot of good stories, including one that illustrates how readily Japanese women take on occidental ideas as to costume. At an early day in the career of new Japan some ladies of Tokio decided to adopt Anglo-Saxon dress, and so they ordered elaborate wardrobes from Paris, sending explicit instructions that the garments should be packed in cases in the order in which they were to be worn. These orders were carefully carried out, lingerie going into the boxes first, and so on to the ultimate outer douncings and furbelows. But by some mischance the cases were labeled wrong side up, and the guileless Japanese ladies proceeded in due time to array themselves in reverse order, with what results may be discreetly left to the imagination.

Saves A Woman's Life.

To have given up would have meant death for Mrs. Lois Craig, of Dorchester, Mass. For years she had endured untold misery from a severe lung trouble and obstinate cough. "Often," she writes, I could scarcely breathe and sometimes could not speak. All doctors and remedies failed till I used Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and was completely cured. Sufferers from coughs, colds, throat and lung trouble need this grand remedy, for it never disappoints. Cure is guaranteed by W. T. Hill. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

Dierault's Early Ideas.

The talk of expense incident to attendance at the coronation of King Edward recalls what Dierault wrote to a friend at the time Victoria was crowned: "I must give up going to the coronation, as all the members of parliament must be in court dresses or uniforms, and I can't afford to buy any. I console myself with the conviction that to get up at 7 o'clock, to sit dressed like a fussy in Westminster abbey for seven or eight hours and to listen to a sermon by the bishop of London are treats which can be missed with fortitude." In later days, when Dierault had gone over from the radical camp to that of the Tories, whom he led as the earl of Beaconsfield, his views of such occasions probably had undergone some transformation.

Acts Immediately.

Colds are sometimes more troublesome in summer than in winter, its so hard to keep from adding to them while cooling off after exercise. One Minute Cough Cure cures at once. Absolutely safe. Acts immediately. Sure cure for coughs, colds, croup, throat and lung troubles. W. T. Hill.

A Forgetful Diplomat.

Viscount De Alto, the new Portuguese minister to this country, comes from a distinguished family, which has for generations been in the diplomatic service of Portugal. He resigned as charge d'affaires in St. Petersburg to accept his new post. It will be remembered that his predecessor, Viscount Thyro, was suddenly recalled last autumn because, through an unfortunate set of circumstances, he announced to his government the death of President McKinley two days before the event occurred.

Seat of the Sixth Sense.

Dr. Javal of the French Academy of Medicine, who is sightless, denies that nature compensates blindness by increased sensibility of touch and hearing, but contends that when a person is blind an extra development takes place in a sixth sense, which is latent in all persons. This sense, which has been called the sense of obstacles, acts by the perception of certain warm and indefinite vibrations. The seat of the sense is believed to be placed in the forehead.

Dark Hair

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for a great many years, and although I am past eighty years of age, yet I have not a gray hair in my head."
Geo. Yellott, Towson, Md.

We mean all that rich, dark color your hair used to have. If it's gray now, no matter; for Ayer's Hair Vigor always restores color to gray hair. Sometimes it makes the hair grow very heavy and long; and it stops falling of the hair, too.

GOOD ADVICE TO WIVES.

Max O'Rell Gives Some Points as to Government of Husbands.

Max O'Rell, in his book, "Her Royal Highness, Woman," gives this advice to wives: "To rule your husband, my dear lady, do exactly as you please, but always pretend that you do as he pleases. That is where your ability comes in. Men are ruled, as children are, by the prospect of a reward. The reward of your husband is your amiability, your sweetness, your devotion and your beauty, of which you should take constant care."

"Always let him suppose that it is for him that you wish to remain beautiful. The woman who believes she is asserting her independence every time she puts on a hat particularly displeasing to her husband is as clever and intelligent as the Irishman who buys a return trip ticket at a railroad office, and on entering the car remarks to the passengers, 'I have played a good joke on the company. I have bought a return ticket, but I don't mean to come back.'"

Poisoning the System.

It is through the bowels that the body is cleansed of impurities. Constipation keeps these poisons in the system, causing headache, dullness and melancholia at first, then unsightly eruptions and finally serious illness unless a remedy is applied. De Witt's Little Early Risers prevent this trouble by stimulating the liver and promote easy, healthy action of the bowels. These little pills do not act violently but by strengthening the bowels enable them to perform their own work. Never gripe or distress. W. T. Hill.

Mistook the Signal.

Gov. Van Sant of Minnesota called on President Roosevelt recently and the chief magistrate intended to ask him to stay and have lunch. The governor took one of the president's gestures for an intimation that the interview was at an end and just then Mr. Roosevelt turned to greet a delegation. When he looked around Mr. Van Sant was gone. A messenger was dispatched in search of the Minnesota man, who was found facing about half a peck of steamed oysters in a swell restaurant. It was too late to go back, he thought, so he remained where he was.

The Bullet and the Bayonet.

The Russian general, Dragomiroff, has lately published in the Razvedchik several articles expressing the view that exaggerated importance is now being given to rifle fire. The truth is, he says, that the bullet prepares and the bayonet decides, and it is the bayonet that produces the really decisive effect. To the Russian general the war in South Africa has been warlike, but not real war. His argument appears to be that, if the Boers had had bayonets, and had used them, Great Britain would have been defeated. He would not, however, exalt either the rifle or bayonet, but would give to each a legitimate place.

Don't Fail to Try This.

Whenever an honest trial is given to Electric Bitters for any trouble it is recommended for a permanent cure will surely be effected. It never fails to tone the stomach, regulate the kidneys and bowels, stimulate the liver, invigorate the nerves and purify the blood. Its wonderful tonic for run down systems. Electric Bitters positively cures kidney and liver troubles, stomach disorders, nervousness, sleeplessness, rheumatism, neuralgia, and expels Malaria. Satisfaction guaranteed by W. T. Hill. Only 50 cents.

A Socialist-Cremationist.

M. Gallen, the old gentleman who has left all his fortune, amounting to about 10,000,000 francs, to the French government, was a member of the Society for the Encouragement of Cremation, to which he has bequeathed 30,000 francs. In his will he naturally stipulated that his body should be cremated, and in addition that it should be conveyed to the cemetery in a hearse of the fifth class, the only mourner to be the secretary of the society. M. Gallen further stated that his ashes should be placed in a receptacle similar to those used by the very poor.

Big Transaction in Cattle.

The purchase of 25,000 head of cattle at one time was the transaction of a Texas man recently. It is said that twenty-five trains were required to transport them.

WHAT GOOD MIGHT BE DONE.

Anarchists and Automobils Working Together for the Public.

The papers recently reported that a man in Meriden, Connecticut, who was said to be an anarchist, had blown his head off with a dynamite cartridge which he held between his teeth while the fuse was burning. "American," transmitting the record of this occurrence to the Weekly, says: "Please encourage this interesting fad. I will be pleased to supply dynamite to any worthy anarchist needing it for purposes stated."

It is a generous offer, and is evidently prompted by public spirit. The trouble is that the habit of blowing one's head off is disorderly, and not to be encouraged, even in an anarchist. Moreover, it is a pity to waste either the dynamite or the anarchist. Now if there was a fad among despondent anarchists for being run over by automobiles they might really help society, for it would lessen the number of anarchists, and at the same time embarrass the automobilists and teach them to run slow. —Harper's Weekly.

Shattered Illusions.

The drowning man was struggling in the water and quick as thought the brave man dived overboard and grasped him just as he was going down the—no, gentle reader, not for the third time, but by actual count the second.

They were roaming, the man and maid, out under the soft light of the moon, when Poesy goes hand in hand with Love. A moonbeam lingered on instant in her tresses, a luminous signal to her pent-up emotions.

"I love"—how sweetly the words trembled on her unaccustomed lips. "Oh, yes; I love devil crabs, but they always give me dyspepsia!"

HAD NO POETIC FEELING.

Retired Poet Sorely Tried by Prosaic Companion.

A retired poet, who is prospecting in the Rockies, writes to a friend his impressions of the scenery. "Whenever I can," he says, "I fall out on some lone peak and drink in a thrifty soulful of sunrises and sunsets, pine-forest, star-dream, and all the myriad enchantments of virgin nature. There is a beauty-fantasy, a joy-illusion about every slope that lifts its tree-fringed lines up to the solemn, snow-crowned heights. In all these ruses and hieroglyphics I read God's beauty message unto man, who refuses to read. The other day I was out with a man on horseback, and the cliffs and tints of a mountainside so appealed to me that I said to him, 'Jim, look at that hillside— isn't it wonderful?'"

"Yaaa," Jim replied; "I'm a-goin' to take it up fer a goat ranch."

"I didn't shoot him," concluded the retired poet, "though I had the gun and the will."—Everybody's Magazine.

Try Orday Plasters.

For rheumatism, pain in the back or side, pneumonia, kidney and heart disease, liver complaint and all kindred diseases. These plasters are formulated for different ailments. Also corn plasters; a sure cure, six for 10 cents. Foot plasters, for cold feet, 20 cents. Agents and canvassers wanted. For particulars address Mrs. J. S. Sutton, General Agent for Lake Co., Antioch, Ill.

WHEN TO GET AWAY.

Small Boy Learns Lesson from Experienced Uncle.

The "fire-devouring" colonel had been telling his small nephews terrible stories of battle and blood, and they had listened, spellbound, for an hour. Then said the youngest: "I s'pose, uncle, that you never ran away from anything, did you?"

The old man thought a great deal before he answered, slowly:

"Ben, if you live long enough you'll find out that it's never well to run away from danger, no matter what; but you will probably meet with occasions when you'll see what a grand thing it is to right-about-face and charge in the opposite direction as fast as you can go."

If A Man Lie To You.

And say some other false, ointment, lotion, oil or alleged healer is as good as Bucklen's Arnica Salve, tell him thirty years of marvelous cures of piles, burns, boils, corns, felons, ulcers, cuts, scalds, and skin eruptions prove it the best and cheapest. 25 cents at W. T. Hill's drug store.

Lace gloves.

Lace gloves, judging from the display in the shops, are to be the vogue this summer. They are of silk or linen thread, cloaked in geometrical or floral designs, much after the manner of the fashionable stockings. There is a return, too, of the "mitts" that our mothers admired, although it seems a little unlikely that these will be adopted except by the extremists, who welcome anything new.

Volcano Dust as a Souvenir.

Visitors to Martinique are bringing home samples of volcano dust as souvenirs. This is unusual. Very few travelers have any dust to bring back in these days of high prices.

Sensitiveness of Incubators.

"An egg in the process of hatching is remarkably sensitive to vibration," says an expert in the breeding of fowls. The rumble of a train or the passage of a wagon along the street will spoil a whole incubator full of eggs if the faintest vibratory wave reaches the apparatus. Even such a little thing as the banging of a door in some other part of the house will destroy the chances of hatching out a brood where care has not been taken to place the incubator beyond the reach of such disturbances. A thunderstorm always gives breeders a scare, as thousands of eggs may be spoiled by a sudden heavy thunder clap. To someone or other in the vicinity of the incubators will sometimes work a disastrous result."—Philadelphia Record.

King Edward's Guardian.

It is not generally known that King Edward, since his accession to the throne, has become the guardian of the children of the Prince and Princess of Wales, and of his other grandchildren, over whom he has complete control, the rights of their parents being superseded. This was decided to be law nearly 200 years ago, by a majority of ten to two judges. The right was frequently used by the Georges, who had a habit of quarreling with their sons. Before members of the royal family can marry they will have to obtain King Edward's consent or the marriage is void. George III. managed to secure this power by means of the royal marriage act, in consequence of his brothers marrying subjects, to his great annoyance.

Vacation Days.

Vacation time is here and the children are fairly living out of doors. There could be no healthier place for them. You need only to guard against the accidents incidental to most open air sports. No remedy equals De Witt's Witch Hazel Salve for quickly stopping pain or removing danger of serious consequences. For cuts, scalds and wounds. "I used De Witt's Witch Hazel Salve for sores, cuts and bruises," says L. B. Johnson, Swift, Texas. It is the best remedy on the market. Sure cure for piles and skin diseases. Beware of counterfeits. W. T. Hill.

Ice Forms Around Iceland.

Reports from Iceland declare that the island is surrounded by mighty sheets of ice. All the firs on the north and east sides are packed with ice, and vessels are cut off from communication with the land. During the last hundred years the island has never before been so thickly circled with ice, and it is feared that the barrier may become even greater in extent. If this should happen, there is a possibility of a famine and in any case the islanders will find a severe scarcity in many articles of food and utility. Meteorologists suppose that the extraordinary cold of this month arises from these colossal masses of ice around Iceland.

Get Immediate Service.

The things which can be done for you now in New York city "while you wait" are numerous. "Your shoes mended" can be seen on many a sign in shoe store windows, and "Coat and trousers pressed" are the invites on signs over tailor shop doors and the words "while you wait" are on all of them. And all the work is done before your eyes, too. Not only this, you can get violin bows repaired while you wait and can have diamonds set while you wait. There's scarcely anything, in fact, these days that you can't get done if you want it done "while you wait. The "while you wait" signs that the eye falls upon in these days are rather strange sometimes also.

Fourth of July.

rates via Nickel Plate road, at one fare for the round trip, July 3 and 4, within 200 miles of starting point. Return limit July 7. Write John Y. Calahan, General Agent, 111 Adams St., Chicago for particulars. 42w3

Men Wear Corsets and Bustles.

In extreme cases men have been known to wear corsets, and now it looks as though bustles might be added to the wardrobe of the heavy dresser. "The military cut will be the proper thing in men's coats this summer," says a fashionable tailor. "There will be a decided flare at the bottom, and unless a man has good hip development the garment will hang loosely, and the effect will be just the reverse of what is intended. Consequently the man with slight hips, if he wants to look well in one of these coats, will have to resort to padding. The padded shoulder has long been adopted, so why not the padded hip? Yes, I suppose you might call it a bustle if you choose."—Philadelphia Record.

Alarm Clock as Memorandum.

Like all other United States Senators, Mr. Dietrich of Nebraska has a great many engagements, but being a trifle forgetful about such things he has adopted an emphatic method of reminding himself. He carries with him a small alarm clock. If he has an engagement, say at 3 o'clock, the alarm goes off ten minutes before that time. Then he sets it for his next appointment, and so on through the day.

Fisheries.

A comparison has been drawn in Norway as to the profit of the fisheries in the sea and in the rivers, which shows that the former are three times as remunerative as the latter.

THEY LIKE ERUPTIONS.

Hawaiians Pray for Volcano to Become Active.

"In Hawaii we pray for Mt. Kilauea to become active, and the more eruptions there are the better we like it," said Philip Peck, a banker of Hilo, at the New Willard last night. "An eruption does not harm," he added naively.

"Doesn't do any harm? Well, it appears that Mont Pelee did plenty of harm."

"That was a different kind of an activity from Mt. Kilauea. In Hawaii, where Mt. Kilauea has not been disturbed for two years, the eruption is of slight consequence. But it is a great sight to see the great lake of lava boil over the sides of the crater and push its way down into the bowl-like valley which has been formed by eruptions more violent in the ages past."

"The sight is such an unusual one that it causes a great influx of visitors each year, and that naturally is a good thing for the island financially. That's why we like the volcano to be active. Kilauea's crater is the largest in the world. People used to go and sit by the edge to watch for an overflow of the lava. The guides could tell almost to the minute when these overflows would occur."

"In 1883 there threatened a great eruption, and the natives were afraid that the town of Hilo would be injured. The Princess Ruth, of the royal family of Kamahameha, went to the mountain down which the lava had begun to run. With her she carried several chickens and one or two other animals. Standing by the edge of the crater, she threw up her head—she was one of those imperial-looking women and weighed about 400 pounds. She called out, addressing the Hawaiian god:

"Pelee, you promised never to hurt Hilo; now I come to remind you of your promise."

"With this she threw the chickens into the lava. The next day the disturbance somewhat subsided, and the natives attributed to the princess the credit of it."—Washington Times.

Mother Always Keeps It Handy.

My mother suffered a long time from distressing pains, and general ill health due primarily to indigestion, says L. W. Spaulding, Verona, Mo. Two years ago I got her to try Kodol. She grew better at once and now at the age of seventy-six eats anything she wants, remarking that she fears no bad effects as she has her bottle of Kodol handy. Don't waste time by doctoring symptoms. Go after the cause. If your stomach is sound your health will be good. Kodol rests the stomach and strengthens the body by digesting your food. It is nature's own tonic. W. T. Hill.

His Objection to Milburn.

Mr. Milburn, chaplain of the senate, is a general favorite because of his personality and his infirmity—he is entirely blind—and will probably retain his office until forced to retire by advancing age, but several years ago when he was chaplain of the house of representatives there was a determined effort to defeat him for reelection and feeling was manifested in the contest both by his supporters and his opponents. Asked what objection he had to the blind chaplain, whose eloquence cannot be questioned, a western representative said: "The fact is, I am tired of hearing Milburn dilaute to the Lord day after day what he ought to do."

Successor of Li Hung Chang.

Li Hung Chang's successor in the title and honors, his eldest son, Li Ching-hsu, did not live long to enjoy his great position and wealth. The Pekin and Tientsin Times contains the announcement of his death in Pekin from kidney disease. The title and honors of the great viceroy now devolve upon a youth of 16 years of age. At one time the boy was given a western training and promised to become an efficient English scholar, but certain occult and anti-foreign influences in the family stopped his studies.

Need More Help.

Often the overtaxed organs of digestion cry out for help by dyspepsia's pains, nausea, dizziness, headaches, liver complaints, blood disorders. Such troubles call for prompt use of Dr. King's New Life Pills. They are gentle, thorough and guaranteed to cure. 25c at W. T. Hill's drug store.

Making Dandelion Wine.

Dandelion wine is a beverage both wholesome and acceptable. An excellent rule for its evolution calls for four quarts of dandelion flowers, a gallon of boiling water, one lemon, three oranges, three pounds of sugar and three tablepoonsful of yeast. To make it put the blossoms in a jar, pour the boiling water over them, and let them stand three days. Then take the juice and grated yellow peel of oranges and lemon and simmer fifteen minutes with the liquid and blossoms. Strain, pour over three pounds of sugar, let it stand until lukewarm, add the yeast, and again set away covered for eight or ten days. At the end of that time strain and bottle.—Washington Star.

When the masses are corrupted in a state, laws are useless without despotism.

His Plea for Mercy.

"You admit you stole the melons?" said the judge. "Oh, yes, sub, I stole um!" "And yet you ask for mercy?" "Yes, sub; kaze de white man kotched me 'fo' I had a chance tor eat um!"—Atlanta Constitution.
